

Law Enforcement Role in a Treatment Court: From Initial Contact to Recovery Capital

Description: This session is designed for law enforcement officers and treatment court team members to better understand the in-depth roles law enforcement can contribute. The content will begin with prevention & initial contact, and progress through the treatment court phases and end with supporting recovery capital.

- Understand the roles and impact law enforcement officers have in treatment courts from prevention, contacts, and patrol functions.
- How to be an effective team member by identifying gaps, assisting with accountability & building therapeutic alliance, and effective communication.
- Examining innovative ways to build additional Recovery Capital from the community.

Length: 75 minutes (with a Q &A included)

Bio:

Dr. Jessie Holton is a U.S. Marine Veteran of Iraq & Afghanistan, career law enforcement officer and licensed clinician, currently serving as a Project Director with All Rise, Impaired Driving Solutions. As an ethnographic sociologist, he has passion for research, education, and advancing best-practices in behavioral health with specific populations, including Veterans, First Responders, and Justice-Involved participants. His background with treatment courts began while serving as a law enforcement liaison in a Veterans Treatment Court and contract faculty member for All Rise. He then transitioned to a clinical provider and served as the clinical supervisor for four treatment courts in the State of Montana. In addition, Dr. Holton is an Assistant Teaching Professor at Montana State University, Department of Counseling, and holds his Bachelor's, Master's, and Doctorate degrees, all from the University of Central Florida.