Introduction to Montana's Courts

The State of Montana was first organized as a territory by the United States Congress on May 26, 1864. With this congressional act the judiciary of Montana was born. However, it was not until Chief Justice Hosmer, appointed by President Abraham Lincoln, arrived in October 1864 that the courts began to be organized. Hosmer was soon followed by two more, Justice Williston and Justice Munson. These three justices served both as judges of fact and appeal: for state and federal cases. In other words, they saw it all. This arrangement ended in November 1889 when the territory was accepted into the union and Montana became a state.

After statehood, the tasks of adjudication in Montana were divided. Justices no longer rode the rails to attend trials across this far-flung state. Montana Justices today focus, instead, on interpreting the state law and applying it to contemporary controversies. The Montana Judicial system is established by Article VII of the Montana Constitution. It deals with cases involving state law or citizens of this state. The Montana court system can be divided into three levels, the supreme court, state district courts and local courts. Most people in Montana have their first court interaction with local courts, of which there are 156. In Montana, all cases in state district courts are appealed directly to the Montana Supreme Court; there is no intermediate court.

Courts in the federal system are established by Article III of the United State Constitution. They handle cases involving federal law, or cases that cross state lines. This system is also divided up into three levels: trial courts, appeal courts and supreme court. In the federal system, however, cases are far more diverse and varied than in state courts.

^{*}Article I Courts are in light blue, Article III Courts are in dark blue, Article IV Courts are yellow.

In total, more than 380 people have served as judges and justices in the courts of Montana. Many of these individuals were politicians, business leaders, soldiers, or pioneers. Most individuals have served their communities well and with integrity. Yet, the courts have faced their share of ups and downs and scandals too. Judges have been impeached for crimes on the bench others have suffered great losses and pain while serving this state; finally, a few have been impeached and later exonerated. This biography hopes to capture some of their stories.

US District Court of Montana

Congress organized Montana into one judicial court district in 1889. The Montana Court District is the largest geographical federal court district in the continental United States. The district is made up of five geographical divisions (see below) and is served by three Article III judges, three senior judges, three magistrate judges, two recalled magistrate judges, one bankruptcy judge and 130 employees who work in the district court, bankruptcy court and United States Probation Office¹.

The Montana Supreme Court

History, 1864 – present

The Territory of Montana was organized by an act of Congress, May 26, 1864². That act vested the judicial power of the territory in a Supreme Court, District Courts, Probate Courts and Justice of the Peace Courts. The Supreme Court consisted of one chief justice and two associate justices³.

The first term of the Supreme Court of the Territory of Montana was held in Virginia City on May 17, 1865⁴. Hezekiah L. Hosmer was appointed as the first Chief Justice by President Abraham Lincoln on June 30, 1864⁵. On June 15, 1864, Lorenzo P. Williston and Ammi Giddings were nominated as Associate Justices of Montana⁶. Ammi Giddings declined to serve and never came to Montana, but his commission remained in force until March 11, 1865, when Lyman E. Munson was appointed to replace him⁷.

In the territorial period of Montana, Justices of the Supreme Court each presided over one of the territory's judicial districts. This arrangement meant that when a case was appealed to the supreme court, one of the Justices personally had tried the case previously⁸. Congress changed this system in July of 1886 by provided for the appointment of a fourth justice and provided for disqualification on appeal of the justice who had tried the case previously⁹.

In the initial years of the Court, decisions were rarely given in writing. The Montana Territorial Legislature changed that in January 1872 by providing for written reporting of the Supreme Court's decisions 10.

The July 1889 term of the Territorial Supreme Court was the last term held before Montana became a state on November 8, 1889¹¹. When the Territorial Supreme Court adjourned sine die on October 5, 1889, the Territorial period ended, and the modern era of statehood began.

Statehood brought several changes to Montana's Judicial System. During Territorial days, Justices and District Court Judges were appointed by the President of the United States. After 1889, Montanans turned to a system where they elected justices, district, and local judges, and judicial officers. They hoped thereby to encourage "more prompt and accessible administration of justice¹²." Justices, district judges and local judges were elected on a partisan ballot until 1909 when a brief and largely forgotten experiment in nonpartisan judicial elections was established¹³. This law was enacted with only one opposing vote in the closing days of the 1909 session. The law prohibited partisan filings by judicial candidates and required their nomination by citizen petition. 1910 was an "off" year for judicial elections; only the Chief Justice and two District Judges were to be chosen. Chief Justice Brantly, known as a populist Republican, won a third term receiving 39% of the votes in a field of four candidates¹⁴.

Voters evidently missed party labels since the total vote cast in the 1910 nonpartisan contest was notably small. Fewer than half of those who voted for Clerk of the Supreme Court on the partisan ballot voted for the Chief Justice on the nonpartisan ballot 15. The experiment was terminated in 1911 when the Supreme Court, on the complaint of a Republican candidate for Butte Police Judge, held the legislation unconstitutional 16. The 1935 the legislature again made judicial elections nonpartisan 17 but the effect on voter participation was not so dramatic as in the one-election experiment in 1910.

Article VIII of the 1889 Constitution established a three-member Supreme Court with members elected to six-year terms. During the first three decades of statehood, the Supreme Court had three justices, but the caseload required additional resources to keep current. The 1903 Legislature provided for the appointment by the Supreme Court of a three-member Court Commission to assist the Court. The commissioners were paid a salary of $4,000 annually for this work. The term of office for the Court Commission was four years, during which time they were prohibited from engaging in the practice of law. The commission worked hard and in two years had cleared the Supreme Court's backlog and in April 1905 the commission was discharged.

The 1919 Legislature increased the membership on the Supreme Court to five members²⁰. In 1921, the Legislature approved the second Court Commission and directed the Supreme Court to appoint three members from among elected District Judges to serve as commissioners of the Supreme Court²¹. The Supreme Court remained at five members until May 1979 when the legislature authorized two additional Justice positions to assist in handling the overburdened court calendar²².

The adoption of the 1972 Constitution did not substantially change the traditional structures of the Montana Judiciary. It did, however, make several modifications; for instance, the terms of Supreme Court Justices were extended from six to eight years and District Court Judges' terms went from four to six years²³. Structurally more significant, the new Constitution adopted a version of merit recruitment for judicial officers that has been described as a unique hybrid of the Missouri Plan²⁴. While the governor appoints judicial officers when vacancies occur, candidates can file against a judge seeking re-election or for a position that is open due to a judge not seeking re-election. After 1974, if a sitting judge is unopposed when seeking re-election, voters are given a Yes or No to retain the judge.

The Office of Court Administrator was created in 1977, to assist the supreme court with its growing duties²⁵.

In August 1989, Governor Stan Stephens appointed District Judge Diane Barz to serve as the first woman on the Supreme Court. Judge Barz was also the first woman District Judge in the State of Montana.

The 2001 Legislative Session enacted legislation for what was commonly called "state assumption of district courts". Under this legislation, the state assumed the cost of all district court employees, except employees in the offices of Clerks of District Court and established the District Court Council²⁶. As part of the plan 275 formerly county employees became state judicial branch employees that year²⁷.

In addition, the 2001 Legislative Session created the District Court Council²⁸. The Council consists of nine members. The District Court Council is charged with administrating the state funding, developing, and adopting policies and procedures, for the district courts.

Court Commissioners for the Montana Supreme Court, 1903-1923

In 1901 the cases before the Montana Supreme Court became so vast that the court found it impossible to keep up with them, specifically the numerous cases related to the mining of ore in Butte. The Legislature took note of this fact but failed to act since they could not agree with the governor who should appoint the new judges. It was not until 1903 that Legislature provided for the appointment by the Montana Supreme Court of a three-member new court commission "of legal learning and personal worth" to assist the court – at a salary of $4,000 per year for commissioners. The term of office for the Court Commission was four years, during which time the commissioners were prohibited for engaging in practice of law. Their work was completed in two years and the commission was discharged in April 1905.

1889

The Montana Constitution of 1889 established eight Judicial Districts in Montana. Each Judicial District encompassed one or more of Montana's sixteen counties. Each Judicial District court was allotted one judge.

The Districts established by the Constitution in 1889 were:

- 1st Lewis and Clark
- 2nd Silver Bow
- 3rd Deer Lodge
- 4th Missoula
- 5th Beaverhead, Jefferson, and Madison
- 6th Gallatin, Park, and Meagher
- 7th Yellowstone, Custer, and Dawson
- 8th Chouteau, Cascade, and Fergus

1891

The Montana Constitution of 1889 also authorized the Montana Legislature to increase or decrease the number of districts and judgeships. So, in 1891 the Montana Legislature created the 9th and 10th Judicial Districts and added a second judgeship in the 1st and 2nd Judicial Districts.

The Judicial Districts established by 1889 were:

- 1st Lewis and Clark
- 2nd Silver Bow
- 3rd Deer Lodge
- 4th Missoula
- 5th Beaverhead, Jefferson, and Madison
- 6th Park, and Meagher
- 7th Yellowstone, Custer, and Dawson
- 8th Cascade
- 9th Gallatin
- 10th Chouteau, and Fergus

- 10th Chouteau, Fergus, and Valley
- 11th Flathead, and Teton

In 1901, Powell and Rosebud Counties were established. Powell County became part of the 3rd Judicial District and Rosebud County was attached to the 7th Judicial District. The legislature also established the 12th Judicial District, which was composed of Chouteau and Valley Counties and Fergus County was moved to the 10th Judicial District. A third judgeship was added to the 2nd Judicial District in Silver Bow County.

That same year, 1901, the Montana Legislature passed a law changing the name of Deer Lodge County to Daly County. However, the Montana Supreme Court held that such a law was special legislation and was prohibited by the Montana Constitution.

The Judicial Districts established by 1901 were:

- 1st Lewis and Clark
- 2nd Silver Bow
- 3rd Deer Lodge, Granite, and Powell
- 4th Missoula, and Ravalli
- 5th Beaverhead, Jefferson, and Madison

The Montana land boom of the 1910s went bust in 1921. Many counties lost population as fast as they gained it. As a result of economic depression and decreases in population, accompanied by reduced judicial caseloads, the 1929 legislature commissioned a special committee to study the "business transacted by the several District Court of the State." The result of the study was that the Montana Legislature completely reorganized several judicial districts and eliminated three districts and seven judges. These changes became effective on January 1, 1933.

The Judicial Districts established by 1933 were:

- 1st Broadwater, and Lewis and Clark
- 2nd Silver Bow
- 3rd Deer Lodge, Granite, and Powell
- 4th Lake, Mineral, Missoula, Ravalli, and Sanders
- 5th Beaverhead, Jefferson, and Madison
- 6th Gallatin, Park, and Sweet Grass

In 1955 the Montana legislature created a third judgeship in the 13th Judicial District.

1957

In 1957 the Montana legislature created a second judgeship in the 11th Judicial District.

1959

In 1959 the Montana Legislature created a third judgeship in the 8th Judicial District.

1963

In 1963 the Montana Legislature created a third judgeship in the 4th Judicial District.

1977

In 1977 the Montana legislature authorized a fourth district judge in the 13th judicial District and a second Judgeship in the 18th Judicial District. The 1977 Legislature also established the 19th Judicial District by removing Lincoln County from the 11th Judicial District, making both Lincoln and Flathead single county judicial districts. The judgeships created in the existing districts were to be elected at the general election held in 1978, while the judgeship in the newly created 19th Judicial District was initially appointed by the Governor.

The Judicial Districts established by 1977 were:

- 1st Broadwater, and Lewis and Clark
- 2nd Silver Bow
- 3rd Deer Lodge, Granite, and Powell
- 4th Lake, Mineral, Missoula, Ravalli, and Sanders

In 1979 the Montana Legislature authorized a fourth district judge for the 4th Judicial District. This seat was initially filled at the 1980 general election and the judge elected took office on January 1, 1981. The principal office of the newly created judgeship was Lake County and the Chief Judge of the 4th Judicial District was given the authority to assign one judge to the seat.

In 1983 the Montana Legislature created the 20th Judicial District by removing Lake and Sanders Counties from the 4th Judicial District. Prairie County was removed from the 16th Judicial District and added to the 7th Judicial District. Chouteau County was removed from the 8th Judicial District and became part of the 12th Judicial District. Treasure County was added to the 16th Judicial District and remove from the 13th Judicial District.

The Montana Legislature also created additional judgeships in the 1st, 7th, and 13th Judicial Districts. All changes became effective January 1, 1985. The judgeships created by the 1983 Legislature were initially filled at the 1984 general election and the judges elected were to take office on the first Monday of January 1985. However, the Legislature provided that the seats could be filled at the 1983 general election if the majority of the county commissioners in each county within the judicial district where the judge was to be elected agreed to conduct the election. If an elected were conducted in 1983, the judge elected would take office on the first Monday of January 1984.

The Judicial Districts established by 1983 were:

- 1st Broadwater, and Lewis and Clark
- 2nd Silver Bow
- 3rd Deer Lodge, Granite, and Powell
- 4th Mineral, Missoula, and Ravalli
- 5th Beaverhead, Jefferson, and Madison

The Montana Workers' Compensation Court

History

Montana's Workers' Compensation Court was created by the Montana Legislature on July 1, 1975. ²⁹ Initially called the Office of the Workers' Compensation Judge, the court's mission is to provide an effective and efficient forum to resolve disputes arising under Montana's Workers' Compensation Act (enacted in 1915), and other issues related to occupational hazards. The Workers' Compensation Court also serves as the Court of Appeals for decisions made by the Montana Department of Industry and Labor. The Montana Supreme Court in Skrukrud v. Gallatin Laundry Co. characterizes the court as 'quasi-judicial' being both administrative and adjudicatory in nature³⁰.

The court was created in response to the outcry following an audit conducted in 1974 by the Montana Legislative Auditor found numerous problems with the current review system³¹. One of the key problems was the dual role assume by the administrator of the Montana Division of Workers' Compensation. This position was responsible for both the administration and enforcement of the law as well as the execution of the state insurance fund, which underwrote the Workers' Compensation Insurance in Montana. The dual role played by the administrator posed an inherent conflict of interest³². In response to the report the Montana Legislature mandated the formation of a select committee to make recommendations to the legislature to resolve this conflict. This led to the removal of the adjudication process from the Division of Workers' Compensation and the creation of the Office of the Workers' Compensation Judge³³.

The Montana Water Court

History

Over 170 years pioneer farmers and miners began to move into the American West and establish homesteads and mines. Because of the arid nature of the west, water rights were (and still are) a big deal. To manage water rights in the West, the custom was adopted that the first person to claim the water and put it to some beneficial use would have the first right to that amount of water³⁴. This custom was later articulated by the California Supreme Court in 1855 as "First in time, First in right" The Montana Supreme Court first recognized this principle in 1921³⁶. As disputes arose and were settled by the state district courts. But over time, it became difficult to track the numerous water rights along a water course and the water became over-appropriated³⁷. By 1939 the Montana Legislature recognized the need to organize the legal system around water rights.

Very little happened though until the 1972 Montana Constitution which recognized existing water rights and directed the state to establish a system of centralized records to administer and regulate those water rights. In 1973 the Montana legislature passed the Water Use Act, which launched the adjudication process. The Montana Department of Natural Resources, now the Montana Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) was tasked with determining existing water rights while the State District Courts would issue decrees established each water right that existed before 1973¹. The task soon became overwhelming and it was estimated the process would take over one hundred years to complete. Litigation from the federal government and tribes further complicated matters¹.

So, in 1979 the Montana Legislature established a special system of water courts to adjudicate the process³⁹. They coupled this with mandatory file of water claims. Today the DNRC examines each claim and submits its findings to the water court. The water court conducts the litigation phase of adjudication, holds public notices and issues final decrees across entire water basins. The following decade saw a marked increase in the verification of water right claims and issuing of decrees. However, there was not clear demarcation of duties and the agency and court often disagreed on responsibilities.⁴⁰ So, in 1987 the Montana Supreme court established, 'Water right claim examination rules' to clarify entity responsibilities⁴¹. This has smoothed the process out significantly.

The water court was designed to be a temporary body. The process, however, has proved more difficult than anticipated. The current estimate to completion puts the end of the water court's work in 2028. With most of the future work to be carried out by the district courts or DNRC. Today the Montana Legislature continues to examine the future of Montana's Water Court.

The water court is made up of the Chief judge an assistant judge and several water masters. On occasion it is one of four district court judges is also called on to adjudicate a case.

The Office of the Montana Court Administrator, 1975-

History

In October 1975 the Montana Supreme Court established the office of the Court Administrator.⁴² The Montana Legislature made the office permanent in 1977.⁴³ The Court Administrator is appointed by the court and holds the position at the pleasure of the court. The office assists the court with its administrative duties. These duties include preparing and managing the judicial budget, compiling court statistics, coordinating judicial education services, administrating the court case management system, providing centralized court staffing, and long-range planning.

The State Law Library of Montana

History⁴⁴

Since the first Justice appointed by President Lincoln, to the Territory of Montana first held court in Virginia City in 1865 there has been a clear need for a law library. The moment the Territory was carved out of the Territory of Idaho, all previous law ceased to apply. This meant all the law of the period had to be created whole cloth or imported as case law from another state. But without law reporters that too was incredibly difficult. To aid the courts, the Montana Territorial legislature created the library in 1866. However, it took five years for the first books, paid for by the United States Congress, to arrive in Montana.

During those early years, the state auditor held the law library in his office and oversaw supervising the law library. The law library soon became scattered and fell into disorder. So, in 1881, the state legislature incorporated the law library as a division into the newly formed state library. It would remain a division until 1949. The justices of the Montana Supreme Court became the library's trustees and the Clerk of the Supreme Court, Mr. Isaac Alden, became the ex-officio librarian. Shortly thereafter, in 1881, the first catalog of the law library was created and listed about 2,000 books in the collection. In 1887 the law governing the law library was re-codified and required the appointment of a librarian to manage the library. In compliance with this law Governor Potts appointed Miss Lou Guthrie as librarian on March 30, 1887.

The law library has moved around to be near the Montana Supreme Court. From 1883-1902 it was on the third floor of the Lewis and Clark County Courthouse. Then in 1902, when the Supreme Court moved into the newly build Capitol building the law library followed. Eventually the library settled in the east wing of the capitol building and it remained there until 1983 when the new Mazurek building was completed.

The law library's main mission is to fulfill the needs of the Montana Supreme Court. To meet this challenge and the needs of the state's legislature, officers, employees, member of the state bar and the public, the library has evolved. It has grown from a library of one part-timer to a staff of 7 full time employees. From a starting collection of about 2,000 volumes the library now has over 215,000 volumes. Its collections now include many subjects not imagined by its founders, including treaties on environmental law, and equitable distribution. It collects not only books, but also, audio/visual, and digital materials as well.
