MONTANA JUDICIAL BRANCH

Youth Court At-A-Glance

July 2005 through June 2006

I am very pleased to provide Montanans with information about the juvenile justice system which is such a critical part of the administration of justice in our great state. The Legislature's visionary Youth Court Act provides the framework in which we exercise our enormous responsibility to Montana's youth, who are—as we all know—our future. Each and every person involved in our Youth Courts is dedicated to the success of Montana's kids and, in recent years, we have instituted major statewide improvements to make our Youth Courts more consistent and uniform, while still providing the flexibility to do what is best for each youth. We certainly will continue our efforts.

The Youth Courts have many purposes. The primary goals are to hold youths accountable to victims and the community for the youths' misbehaviors, reduce the risk of juveniles re-offending through skill development, and increase public safety through a variety of appropriate management tools for dealing with youths.

Thank you for showing your interest in Montana's youth and their futures by taking time to learn more about our Youth Court system and the youths, families and communities it serves. The information contained in this brief Youth Court At-A-Glance will help you understand how the juvenile justice system works in Montana and, ultimately, will help us improve the system to meet our overall goal of preparing youths at risk to become productive adults.

JUVENILE JUSTICE OVERVIEW

Juveniles usually enter the juvenile justice system through contact with law enforcement, although they may be referred to probation by other agencies and parents. Juvenile probation is an integral part of the Youth Court and is overseen by the Youth Court judge within each of the 22 Judicial Districts. Most referrals to the Youth Court's juvenile probation office are in the form of a ticket accompanied by a report from law enforcement. Juvenile probation officers may handle any referral except traffic and fish and game violations, which fall under the jurisdiction of the Justice, Municipal, City, and District Courts.

Youth referred to probation must appear in front of the juvenile probation officer with a parent or guardian to answer to the allegations against them. Most youth will never see the Youth Court judge and will work solely through the Youth Court juvenile probation officer to resolve the ticket in what is referred to as the informal process. If the referral is forwarded to the county attorney and a petition is filed on the alleged charges, the youth will appear before the Youth Court judge in what is referred to as the formal process. Approximately 25% of the youth referred to juvenile probation each year are handled formally.
